The new office is designed with sustainability at its core, with features that align with the Reworld™ mission to reimagine what's possible in sustainability. The building's Double Platinum LEED certification, LEED's highest level, represents best-in-class performance in environmental efficiency, occupant wellness and sustainable operations. Sustainable infrastructure includes energy-efficient appliances and abundant natural lighting. Additional eco-conscious amenities promote reusing materials and reducing waste, particularly single-use plastics. The space also offers a collaborative layout and state-of-the-art meeting rooms to support flexible and connected work.

"Our new headquarters is more than just a place to work – it's a symbol of our values and a platform for continued growth," said Azeez Mohammed, President & CEO of Reworld™. "This move demonstrates our commitment to innovation, sustainability and our people. It supports our mission to deliver smarter waste solutions and provides an environment that will inspire collaboration and impact for years to come."

Reworld™ also took steps to ensure the relocation process itself aligned with sustainability best practices by reducing the need for new materials and emphasizing reuse, donation and recycling. Many office furnishings from the previous headquarters location were reused in the new space, while select items were donated to neighboring municipalities for community use.

As Reworld™ continues to grow its footprint in sustainable waste solutions, the Florham Park headquarters will serve as a launching pad for bold ideas and meaningful impact.
